New Visions for Public Schools believes:

- In the power of public schools
- Addressing the challenges schools face means paying attention to how schools actually work
- Improvement happens through consistent action over long periods of time – not through quick fixes
- Explicit attention to building strong organizational systems is key to sustain school improvement
- People working in schools need professional, high-quality tools and resources to effectively do their jobs
- In being data-informed, but human-centered

New Visions for Public Schools was founded in 1989 as the “Fund for New York City” by Richard I. Beattie and Beth Lief with a mission to secure private support for innovative NYC public school programs. From 1993 to 1998, it led efforts to convert large high schools into small, student-focused learning environments, designing and launching 40 new schools. As part of the New Century High Schools Initiative (2001–2008), New Visions opened 99 innovative small schools in partnership with the Bloomberg Administration. In 2006, New Visions became a Partnership Support Organization (renamed Affinity in 2013), serving as a lead partner to a network of secondary schools. In 2009, it launched Urban Teacher Residency programs with Hunter and Queens Colleges, certifying over 350 teachers through a clinical model (2009–2021) who outperformed their peers in retention rates and outcomes for their students. Beginning in 2010, New Visions opened eight charter high schools (managing ten until their 2023 transition to independent management). In 2013, the organization began co-designing high school curriculum and launched Cloudlab, a suite of Google Apps for Education add-on extensions that have been installed by over 50 million users and provides educators and school leaders with free and flexible tools to promote the redesign of teaching. In 2017, Portal, a student planning and school management tool was launched and expanded to all high schools by 2019 and to all K–12 public schools by 2021 based on its success. Between 2021 and 2023, New Visions launched Career Academies, an innovative hands-on five-week career exposure program for rising 11th graders with corporate partners Lazard, Centerview, Evercore, and Silver Lake, and Navigate, which has brought the “commitment to excellent instruction in every classroom” to districts in eight states, through comprehensive learning packages for school districts and individual schools. As of today, New Visions supports 71 partner district high schools across all five boroughs of New York City.

Impact of work

The impact of New Visions for Public Schools' work is expansive, and its initiatives have created lasting, transformative change in a number of ways.

New Visions' data tools have supported successful efforts to reduce chronic absenteeism, boost credit accumulation, and improve graduation outcomes in NYC's Community and Renewal Schools. Even after their most intensive coaching support ended for NYC's lowest-performing high schools, those that adopted the tools continued to make dramatic improvements in graduation outcomes. New Visions led one of the nation's most impactful urban education reforms—the creation of small, themed schools that replaced struggling large high schools in NYC—fostering stronger student-teacher connections and more personalized approaches. From 1993 to 1998, New Visions launched 40 schools and, as a lead partner in the New Century High School Initiative, opened an additional 99 public high schools; rigorous evaluations show these efforts nearly halved the graduation gap between white students and students of color in NYC.

The innovative teacher and leadership programs created a pipeline of skilled, diverse educators and improved retention and student outcomes across high-need NYC schools. Between 2009 and 2021, over 355 teacher candidates completed Urban Teacher Residency programs and entered district schools, providing pipelines in high-need areas like STEM and Special Education and improving retention—after three years only 15% of UTR-trained teachers had left the classroom, compared with 34% of all new NYC high school teachers. Beginning in 2011, New Visions opened eight charter high schools and managed two others serving highest-need students; over thirteen years, it built one of the largest and most high-performing charter high school networks in NYC, served as a laboratory for district programs such as adolescent literacy, and transitioned these mature schools to independent management in 2024.

New Visions served nearly 400 schools with its Science Professional Learning series during the 2024–2025 academic year; in 2025–2026, 456 NYC schools selected New Visions Science as their Core Curriculum and 175 schools across five NYC districts received support to implement high-quality math curriculum through NYC Solves. In postsecondary pathways, 623 students in New Visions Career Academy earned over $550,000 in stipends and reported growth in basic financial literacy skills related to paychecks, personal banking, and financial decision making, while New Visions distributed over $1.2 million in scholarships to partner-school students. More than 170 schools and organizations participated in College/Career Access and Action Networking (CAAN). The Portal reached over 1,500 schools, and more than 200 shelters supporting over 60,000 students living in shelters accessed it. Student outcomes included 81% of 2023 college enrollees persisting to year two, 73% of the Class of 2024 enrolling in college, and a 90% on-time graduation rate for New Visions Affinity Schools in 2025.

ROLE OF THE CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER

Reporting directly to the President, the Chief Financial Officer (CFO) will be responsible for providing leadership, hands-on management, and continuous improvement for the organization's day-to-day financial operations. This role requires a proven strategic, process-minded leader with experience in managing teams and cultivating a performance-driven culture among diverse, talented individuals. The ideal candidate will possess the skills, sensitivity, and confidence necessary to collaborate effectively across teams to develop efficient systems that enhance organizational productivity.

It's an exciting time for New Visions for Public Schools as the organization works to codify systems and structures for sale with The Portal, as an example, being used across the city, New York State, and out-of-state schools. The organization is also looking to invest in post-secondary career readiness and opening new pathways for apprenticeships and internships. The CFO will play a pivotal role in developing a financial strategy for contracts in NYC and beyond working to implement effective business and finance models that will serve the expansion of services of New Visions. The CFO will have strengths in developing pricing models to create sustainable finance models for the organization, effectively communicating financial information to a Board of Directors, and have experience working with city and/or government contracts.

The CFO's core responsibilities will include overall management of the Finance Unit, with a focus on budgeting, financial management and reporting, and accounting.

New Visions believes that our teams are most effective when they include representation from the diverse communities we serve, as their perspectives are critical to the work we do. Diversity, equity, and inclusion do not determine who gets hired—that is based on qualifications. They ensure that people who have traditionally had less access to opportunities are considered and once chosen, feel supported and valued as part of our team.
